Information for proposed licensees

The purpose of this guidance is to assist proposed licensees in preparing a notice of intention to apply for a gambling licence under section 95 of the Gambling Regulation Act 2024 (the "Act"). It sets out:

- ▶ what information must be included in a notice
- ▶ where notices must be published
- ▶ notice templates

What do I need to do?

All persons intending to apply for a gambling licence, or applying for the renewal of a gambling licence, must publish a public notice. A notice must be published at least 28 days before you apply for a gambling licence.

What must the notice include?

A notice must include:

- ▶ details of the proposed licensee,
- ▶ the type of licence being applied for and,
- ▶ in the case of an application for an in-person licence, a list of every premises to which the licence will apply.

There should be one notice for each licence application. If you are applying for an in-person licence to provide gambling activities at multiple premises, the notice may need to be published in multiple places. Please see the guidance below.

If any of the details included in the notice of intention are not mirrored in the licence application made to the Gambling Regulatory Authority of Ireland ("GRAI"), the licence application may be refused. In such cases, a new notice may need to be made reflecting the correct details which would require a fresh 28-day period. You must ensure that all information included in any notice is accurate and correct at the time of publication.

Where do I have to publish the notice?

Where you are applying for an in-person licence to provide gambling activities at a premises, you must publish the notice in a local newspaper circulating in the local authority area in which the premises is located. Publication in local newspapers will ensure that communities are informed of the gambling activity that is proposed for their area.

Where you are applying for an in-person licence to provide gambling activities at multiple premises, and these premises are spread across different local authority areas, you must publish the notice in local newspapers circulating in those local authority areas and in a national newspaper. A national newspaper means a daily newspaper circulating in the State.

Publication in a national newspaper in addition to local newspapers will provide increased visibility reflecting the broader geographical spread of the proposed licensee's operations.

Where you are applying for an in-person licence to provide on course betting activities at one or more relevant premises and nowhere else, you must publish the notice in a national newspaper only. A relevant premises is:

- ▶ a greyhound racetrack under the Greyhound Industry Act 1958
- ▶ an authorised coursing ground under the Greyhound Industry Act 1958
- ▶ an authorised racecourse under the Irish Horseracing Industry Act 1994
- ▶ a place at which a point-to-point steeplechase meeting is being held under the Irish Horseracing Industry Act 1994

Where you are applying for a remote gambling licence, you must publish the notice in a national newspaper only.

It is the responsibility of the proposed licensee to ensure that the selected local newspaper where the notice is published is circulating within the local authority area to which the licence application relates. There are 31 local authorities in Ireland. The local authority for your premises will be the county council, city council or city and county council responsible for the area in which the premises is located.

It is also the responsibility of the proposed licensee to ensure that the selected national newspaper is a daily newspaper circulating in the State.

Publication must be made in the physical and online editions of the local and national newspapers.

Once a notice has been published, a copy or copies must be sent to notices@portal.grai.ie as soon as practicable along with details of the newspaper where the notice was published and the date on which it was published. The GRAI will publish the notice on its website as soon as practicable after receipt.

The form of notice to be used, along with explanatory notes, are set out below.
